“What Must I Do To Be Saved?”
Mark Lindley

There could be no question of greater importance. The answer to this question will determine where each person will spend eternity. The question was asked by a man identified as “the jailor,” or “the Philippian jailor” (Acts 16:22-34). After the jailor had beaten Paul and Silas and had thrown them into prison, there was an earthquake. During the earthquake, the foundations of the prison were shaken, and the prison doors were opened. The jailor knew the prisoners had an opportunity to escape, and in the darkness of the prison, he imagined that they had done just that. This thought terrified the man because he believed he would have to pay with his life for allowing the prisoners to escape. I am sure the jailor was relieved to hear Paul say, “Do thyself no harm: for we are all here” (verse 28). It was then that the jailor came before Paul and Silas and asked, “What must I do to be saved?” (verse 30).

Paul and Silas answered the question, stating, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (verse 31).

For many, this ends the conversion account of the Philippian jailor. They conclude that Paul and Silas probably led the man in “the Sinner’s Prayer,” the man “accepted Jesus” and he was saved.

Yet, the actual account reveals that what many assume about the jailor did not happen. The following is the actual record of what happened after Paul and Silas answered the man’s question: “And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house” (verses 32-34).

The account reveals some details of extreme importance: 1) They spoke to him the Word of the Lord. This shows the man did not have sufficient knowledge to become a Christian, so Paul and Silas taught him; 2) He washed their stripes. This shows the man was sorry for having beaten Paul and Silas. In other words, he “repented”; 3) He was baptized the same hour of the night. This man was baptized sometime after midnight (earthquake occurred at midnight); 4) Then, after the man had been baptized, he “rejoiced.”

One can safely conclude that the jailor was commanded to believe. He was then taught what he had to believe. He then believed, repented, was baptized the “same hour,” and after he had done these things, he rejoiced!

Let’s accept all the Bible teaches about conversion. The truth makes us free (John 8:32).

God, His Word, Your Heart
Robert Notgrass

In Psalm 119:130, it states, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." When we open our Bible to read, it seems as if God is shining a light into our minds. Every word, each character, all the prayers and the acts of faith we visualize, from the word of God, is an opening by which light is let into our seeking souls.

When a door is open so that we enter into a house, this is what the word of God is doing. It is to open to us so that we may see its beauty. But, it is not understood by just anyone. The simple ones understand. That is, those who are open to persuasion, who humbly seek it and give heart to instruction. The psalmist said, "The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple" (Psa. 19:7).

Surely, God has a way to open the heart and warming it up. In the New Testament, Luke records that, "they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?" (Lk. 24:32). All of us as followers of Jesus know how precious and tender His life was and how our hearts glow when we think back or hear of His life, sufferings and death. How blind people may be to the plainest doctrines of the Scriptures. Yet, to us who read, who desire to know God's word, it gives us understanding that Jesus is the Messiah, that God reigns in Heaven and that Christians are His children. Let God's word therefore, open your heart.

Will you humble your heart enough to let God's Word direct you?

Caught up in the Traffic of Life
Stephen Null

Imagine you are driving on a highway around 5 PM in a large city. The road is bustling with traffic and everyone is driving ten miles per hour over the speed limit. You are in the middle of this traffic, and in order to avoid an accident, you accelerate to match their speed. In doing so, you unwillingly violate the law and risk penalty from the police.

I think this is a common situation in which we find ourselves. Regardless of the merit of maintaining the speed of those driving around you, I would like to demonstrate how this applies to a Christian's choice of company. Often times, those we frequently associate with are the same people who influence us the most. They affect our behavior, speech, and attitude toward everything in life. But, this is usually more harmful than good.

Think about the story of Rehoboam in 1 Kings 12. Here, Rehoboam rejects the counsel of the elders who stood before Solomon in favor of the young men with whom he grew up (1 Ki. 12:8). This disastrous mistake led to the division of the Israelite nation, and it was all because he listened to his foolish friends rather than the wise elders.

Have you ever found yourself in a similar scenario? The people we associate with have the capacity to influence us for godliness or wickedness. Paul tells the Corinthians that evil company corrupts good morals (1 Cor. 15:33). As Christians, we need to take a good hard look at those with whom we associate. We may have friends, relatives, or family that causes us to stumble in our Christian walk. This week, I ask you to evaluate your relationships and determine whether or not keeping company with immoral people is worth losing your soul. We must not forget Jesus expects us to be willing to forsake everything to follow Him, even those we care about (Luke 14:25-35).
